

The Fox and the Little Sparrow

Once upon a time, in a deep forest, lived a clever fox. She was always proud of her strength and intelligence.

*One day, a tiny sparrow got trapped in a hunter's net. The little bird cried,
"Please help me! If the hunter comes, he will take me away!"*

*The fox looked at the sparrow and laughed,
"What good can such a small bird do for me? But fine, I will save your life."*

The fox used her sharp teeth to cut the net, and the sparrow was free.

*The sparrow promised,
"I may be small, but one day, I will surely help you."*

*The fox smiled and said,
"You? Help me? You are too small!" and walked away.*

Days later...

*The fox herself was caught in a large hunter's trap. This time, she cried loudly,
"Help! Please, someone save me!"*

All the forest animals stayed quiet, but soon the little sparrow came flying.

She pecked at the ropes and called her friends. Together, the sparrows cut through the net thread by thread.

*Finally, the fox was free. Feeling ashamed, she said,
“A tiny sparrow saved my life! Now I understand that no act of kindness is ever too small.”*

★ Moral:

“Kindness always comes back. Never underestimate the power of a small good deed.”
